When planning a show please keep in mind that a comedian usually has 30-40 minutes of strong material. When booking just one comedian I suggest a show length of 30 minutes; the comedian will go longer if the audience borders on hysteria. Remember, the most important thing to you, is the audience's reaction; not how long the comedian is on stage. I have also found that the audience tires after listening to any one person speaking for over 40 minutes.

A one comic show usually costs anywhere from $600 to $5,000 (comics with TV exposure get at least $7,500 guarantees and make upwards of $50,000 for a performance).

A two-comedian show will cost from $1,200 to $3,500. (approx. 60 - 75 minutes).

A three comedian show (our most popular) costs approx. $1,800 to $5,000. (approx. 90 - 120 minutes).

Prices vary for the 2 and 3 man show due to your location and what comedians are chosen

For employers that are advertising to the public, I also have an information sheet on how to properly stage a comedy show and can supply you some promotional flyers, logos and pictures of the comedians.

All prices quoted are plus hst/gst and sound and lights. Most halls/hotels have adequate sound and we can get by with their lighting. If you are employing a disc jockey they usually have an adequate system, you probably will only have to rent/obtain a microphone stand. Prices quoted are for engagements within 200 km of their home base. Hotel rooms may be required for engagements over 200 km from their home base especially in winter months.
